In resuming our editorial duties, we extend to all our readers, hearty best wishes for their success and happiness during the New Year. In common with the rest of mankind, we of course too, "have turned over a new leaf," under the influence of which the season inspires, and on it so far at least, we hope naught has been written, which is not fraught with kindness for all. At least we have enough charity at its beginning to think kindly of every one and shall hope that it will so constrain us that "naught will be set down in malice" against anyone until its close. Of course the year like all others, will bring with it its vicissitudes of care and the shadows will fall on those to whom adverse fate may come, may they be prepared to meet it and behind every cloud find the "silvery lining," which speedily will make glad their hearts again. But whatever our losses and sorrows may be, the future has more of good than evil in store for us, and the fact that "care sits more lightly upon those" who with brave hearts bear its burdens, should give encouragement and hope to all in the work they may have to do. At least, whatever the disappointments and losses in the past year, and however dark our prospects may be now, there seems to be but one way to better our prospects in the future and that is by forgetting our past ills, to press forward with new hope and bold resolve.

Cluverius, unless granted another reprieve by the Governor will suffer the death penalty next Friday. He still protests his innocence and it is asserted most emphatically that he will continue to do so, even on the scaffold. His brother who has stood by him so nobly during his troubles, says he has no confession to make. It is certain that his sentence will not be commuted by the Governor, and it is not probable that another respite will be granted him. Standing as he does on the edge of the scaffold, the question of his guilt or innocence, engages the attention of the people of Virginia, more than any one subject perhaps, and their verdict almost without exception seems to be "guilty, but not proved." That he committed the crime for which he has been sentenced, and should hang, we believe, but as a juror could never have consented to the verdict which has been passed upon him. The acts of three of the jurors since the trial, show that regular clamor, rather than proof influenced them. Their doubts as to the wisdom of their verdict almost convinces us, that so vile a criminal as we believe Cluverius to be, is a proper subject for executive clemency. Another respite in view of all the facts, would certainly have the approval of most of the people of Virginia.

Senator John A. Logan, Republican candidate for vice President on the ticket with James G. Blaine, in 1884, is dead. For many years he was a prominent figure in our country and his record contains much that is creditable to him, but he cannot be classed among the "great men" of the United States, nor can any Southern man consider him faultless, who remembers his efforts to degrade and humiliate them, in securing the adoption of reconstruction measures. That he possessed many noble traits of character every one concedes, but that his bitter partisanship tarnished to some extent his good reputation is also equally true. That he was not a citizen of the South, but that he sinned against them believing he was right, no one perhaps doubts. His military record was a fine one, his services as an office holder are strictly, we believe, in accord with his notions of right. In private and public life he was incorruptible, we believe—a fact which can hardly be doubted, as with all the opportunities he had to enrich himself, he died poor. His record is a good one, but had he been more charitable to the Southern people, would have been better.

The Richmond Dispatch last Saturday published the trade statistics of that city for the year just closed, showing a very satisfactory condition of affairs, notwithstanding the labor troubles during the year. More than eighteen thousand persons are employed in its manufacturing establishments, an increase of 2,154 over the previous year. Four thousand two hundred white girls form one division of this army of workers, and their yearly earnings amount to the neighborhood of one million dollars.—Norfolk ledger.

CLUVERIUS.

Juror Harrison Says His Trial Was "A Horrible and Ghastly Farce."

RICHMOND, December 31.—Mr. Carter Harrison, one of the twelve jurors who brought in the verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree in the case of Thomas J. Cluverius, tried here for killing his cousin, Miss Fannie Lillian Madison, has addressed a lengthy letter to Governor Lee, appealing to him to reconsider his official action declining to commute the punishment of Cluverius. In his letter Mr. Harrison admits the authorship of the appeal for commutation which was presented to the Governor some weeks ago, signed by himself and two fellow jurors, Messrs. French and Sherwood. Mr. Harrison says he had alone been the man to bear the brunt, stand the assaults of the bloodthirsty rabble, whose rabid instincts control in reason's stead, the appeal would have been couched in a far different strain. Continuing, he says Cluverius' trial and conviction from first to last "was a horrible and ghastly farce, revolting in every way tending to bring dishonor and shame on the jurisprudence of the Commonwealth."

In writing the appeal for commutation Mr. Harrison says the object was simply to frame a document acceptable to the largest number of jurors and, above all, "knowing from a month of familiar intercourse and close association the novel character of some of our colleagues, it was deemed best to ask them to agree to something which, if pressed too hard by public opinion, upon which their lives and characters seemed so vitally to depend—they could somehow wriggle out of, or at least something non-committal." Despite this, the petition was untouched in Richmond except by Mr. Harrison, which he attributes to the position taken by the Richmond press. Mr. Harrison disclaims any intention to reflect upon the character or moral courage of any gentleman of the jury who declined to sign the appeal for commutation. "But," says Mr. Harrison, "unfortunately for the furtherance of the ends of justice and the maintenance of a just and unimpeached administration of the law, they have perhaps a somewhat too profound regard for public opinion."

Mr. Harrison says it is a matter of common report that one of the jurors who sat upon the case was a perjurer, and says this report is substantiated by the solemn oaths of a hall score or more of reputable citizens in Alexandria. He further says that "there is among very many worthy persons an idea that the case had not at the time of hearing by the Court of Appeals, nor has yet, been freed from the manipulatory influences of the hired detectives and other manufacturers of evidence to order."

Alluding to the opening of the watch key by Joel, the "itinerant key maker," for the Governor's inspection, Mr. Harrison says "that was new evidence, and the argument was supplied by the prosecuting attorney in reply to the Governor's request for an opinion." He suggests that this proceeding was ex parte.

Mr. Harrison reiterates what he had stated in a former communication, that "if the jury were invested with discretionary powers they were ignorant of the fact, for had they been enlightened upon this point no verdict of murder in the first degree could or should ever have been reached, notwithstanding threats, menaces and every other effort to intimidate, efforts which have continued up to the present time—as far as your correspondent is concerned—in the form of abuse, insulting and cowardly messages through the mails, from dastards and cravens all over the land."

Mr. Harrison says he does not refer to the innocence or guilt of Cluverius. He simply contends that he has not had a fair and impartial trial. He claims that Cluverius had a right to be tried by twelve of his peers, and this was not done, "unless Cluverius is an imbecile, and subjected to all the mental disorders superinduced by imbecility." Mr. Harrison suggests that the Governor consult Dr. Cabell, "who was called in at the Exchange Hotel to attend one of the jurors. Ask him as to the probable mental condition of his patient during the first three days of his trial."—Baltimore Sun.

APPEAL TO MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

The following is the text of the circular letter sent to the members of the Legislature by the Governor, in relation to the case of Cluverius, brother of Thomas J. Cluverius.

"I address you in behalf of my brother T. J. Cluverius, whose circumstances are well known to every one in the State. It has been suggested to me that his life might be saved through action by the Legislature in some way as a coordinate department of the government, since many members of that body have expressed their conviction that his life should not be taken. I have heard that the Legislature will certainly be called to gether about the 1st of February next. My object in addressing you is to make the request that you send me an application, addressed to the Governor from yourself, requesting him to grant a reprieve to my brother until some day after the Legislature shall meet, in order that they may have an opportunity of taking action, if deemed right and judicious. The day fixed for the execution is the 14th of January, and I should like a response before the 5th.

"I will not undertake to urge reasons in favor of this request, or to make suggestions as to what action can be taken. I leave both to your intelligent appreciation of facts known to all.

"This request I will make of all the members of the Legislature, or so many at least as I can reach, and will leave their action to their own sense of justice and fairness, and to their desire that the laws of the State shall be equally and properly executed, and a fair trial had by an impartial jury—a right guaranteed to every man."

own sense of justice and fairness, and to their desire that the laws of the State shall be equally and properly executed, and a fair trial had by an impartial jury—a right guaranteed to every man."

GOV. LEE INVITED TO MEET HIM.

Gov. Lee Monday morning received a letter from Willie Cluverius, brother of the condemned man, asking him to visit the prisoner in jail.

The Governor declined to visit the prisoner unless Cluverius had some new and important facts in his case to present for his consideration. He sees no reason for communication with the prisoner.

THE LATEST PHASE IN THE CLUVERIUS CASE.

It seems to be the impression that a further effort will be made to save Cluverius' life, by attempting to get the case before the United States Court on a writ of habeas corpus, on the ground that the prisoner had not had a fair and impartial trial which is guaranteed to every citizen of the United States under the Constitution.

The alleged unfairness is that three of the jurors who sat upon the case have avowed that they would have rendered a different verdict if they had known they could have done so under the rulings of the lower court.—State.

Winter Tours over the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Pursuant to the annual custom the Pennsylvania Railroad Company placed on sale at its offices, November 1st, a stock of winter excursion tickets to all the prominent winter resorts of New Jersey, Virginia, Florida, and other prominent points in the Southern States, and to Havana. These tickets are sold at reduced rates, in consideration of which they are required to be used on the south-bound trip within fifteen days from the date of purchase as stamped on the back, and for the return trip prior to May 31st, 1887. Stop-offs permitted at any point named on the ticket, and if the tourist desires to break the journey at any other point, he should apply to the conductor of the train or purser of the boat, who will grant the permission by issuing stop over check or notation on the ticket.

These tickets cover almost every Southern point to which winter travel tends, and the variety of route offered by the extensive Southern connections of the Pennsylvania Railroad, commends its lines to the favor of the traveler, to whom ease, comfort, promptness, and speed are material considerations. Through buffet and sleeping cars run between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, and the tourist to Cuba may make the trip without interrupting his journey, except at Tampa, where he exchanges the car for the steamer.

For further and detailed information, apply at the ticket offices of the company and connecting lines.

The New South.

Bishop Mallison, of the M. E. Church, delivered a lecture in Cincinnati Friday evening on the South, in which he told of the great importance of that region. "Massachusetts," he said "is just one sixteenth as large as Texas, which is only one of the Southern States. The entire South is more than 100 times as large as Massachusetts. Its capacities are immense. The soil, if properly tilled, is as fertile as any in the country, while the forests are fully as valuable as those of the extreme North. Iron, steel, zinc and copper, which are found in greater or less abundance—iron and coal are there in great quantities. Iron can be produced in Alabama, shipped and sold in Pennsylvania cheaper than Pittsburgh iron, despite Pittsburgh's advantage in having gas. There is immense capacity for development, both of wealth and inhabitation."

VIRGINIA NEWS.

The value of domestic exports from Newport's News during the year just closed was four and a half million dollars greater than in 1885.

Mrs. Sallie Washington, relict of the late Mr. Lawrence Washington, of Westmoreland County, Va., and grand-niece of Gen. Washington, died on Monday, 27th ulto, aged 87 years.

The Governor to-day that the question as to calling an extra session of the Legislature had not yet been reached or decided by him. This is a question that is now being much discussed, and the Governor will in a few days determine as to whether the Legislature will be called back again.—Norfolk Virginian 3rd.

The frame of "Old Sorrel," the horse Stonewall Jackson rode on the ill-fated field of Chancellorsville, has been mounted by a taxidermist, who is said, is now exhibiting it somewhere in the North. "Old Sorrel," it will be remembered, died at the Soldier's Home some months ago, and his frame will be placed somewhere at the Home as soon as the taxidermist brings it back to Richmond.—Norfolk Virginian.
